in association with The Oregonian, present

Tyler Boley Photographer

Bringing Traditional Photography Standards Into the Digital Age

At this Pacific Northwest Color Management Users Group event, photographer Tyler Boley will be giving a talk about the challenges of keeping very high craft alive and well in this digital age. Tyler comes from a background of demanding standards in fine art and commercial photography, and he is interested in how the evolution of our tools and methods help us meet those high standards set by generations of master photographers. We'll discuss Tyler's own methods and frustrations with color management, and also more off-the-wall unusual applications of color management to achieve desired results. Tyler will bring some prints, too. This will be a fun and enlightening event.
